ABSTRACT

This study provides evidence from Indonesia on the role of banks credit particularly regional development banks for promoting micro, small and medium scale business across counties or rural areas allover Indonesia. The basic aim of this study is how to promote economic growth and, reduce both unemployment and poverty across rural areas. To document the link of banks credit particularly regional development banks that owned by the regional governments, I propose a mandatory relationship between regional development banks and rural governments to promote economic growth through usage of rural budget provide by central government according to Rural Act 2014 Number 6. I also reveal how to enhance postmodernism society for creating demand side economy in order to promote economic growth and welfare across rural areas allover Indonesia.
